Applying Learning Theories

Presented by Jeff Schillinger

Students come to us with a variety of intellectual and academic abilities, experiences, likes and dislikes, yet many college faculty members teach as if all students learn the same way.

As teachers, it is our responsibility to develop and deliver lessons that allow each of our students to leverage their areas of strength and to develop new abilities in areas outside of current comfort zones. "Applying Learning Theories" examines the ways students take in and process information and provides practical teaching strategies to address varied intake styles and types of intelligences.

About Jeff Schillinger

Jeff is currently the Director of Academic Training and Compliance for Indiana Business College, a 105 year-old chain of privately held career schools in Indiana. Prior to joining Indiana Business College in 2006, Jeff served as the National Dean at ITT Educational Services. His primary responsibility during the past ten years has been training teachers and administrators to better serve students and improve retention. Jeff has received the ITT Quality Award for excellent instruction in 1995.

Jeff has been an educator for over 25 years, serving in the proprietary school industry since 1994. He has taught sixth grade through college and has coached several sports. Jeff has delivered workshops on retention and teaching at association meetings in several states. He twice facilitated the retention workshops at ACICS Retention and Placement Forums.

Jeff holds a Bachelor of Science Degree in Education from Wayne State University and a Master of Science Degree in Education from Indiana University. He is married, has two teenage daughters and lives in Westfield, Indiana.
